Scroll storyboard v1

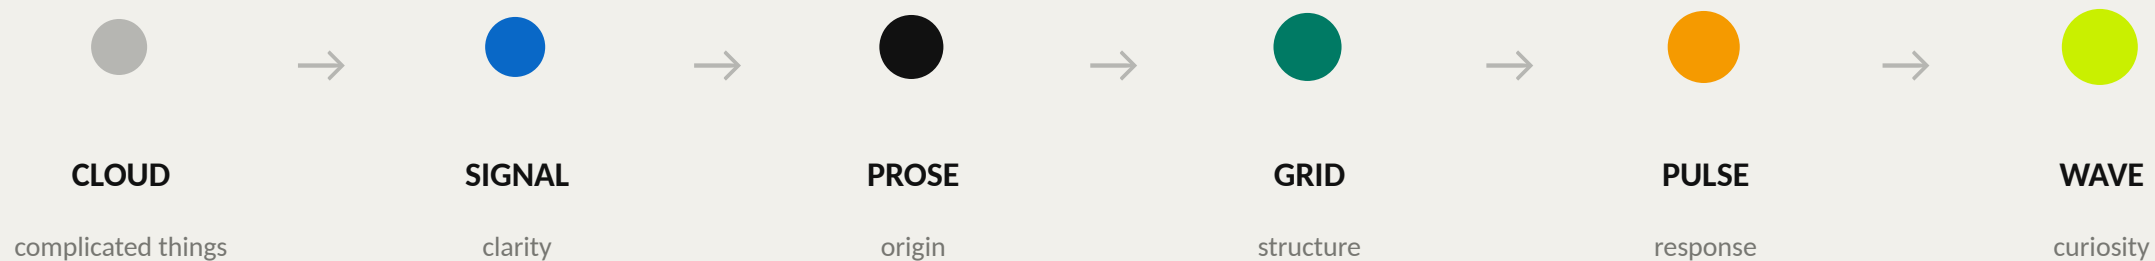

CLARITY WITHOUT FLATTENING

Twelve indicative boards using the proposed page copy, dot states and typographic rhythm.

The page moves from complexity to life

The same dot material changes state as the argument changes.

deep space → quiet prose → ordered space → stillness → living space

Entry promise

The first viewport signals that this is a short scroll story. The cloud waits in the distance; the opening line is visible before movement begins.

SCROLL ↓

Approach the cloud

Scroll moves both camera and type. The statement reaches one stable reading plane before it grows past the viewer.

DIGITAL EXPERIENCES ARE OFTEN ASKED TO MAKE

COMPLICATED THINGS FEEL SIMPLE.

Enter the complication

The first turn appears inside the busy field. Large type is close enough to feel physical, but remains readable before it passes the camera.

FLAT.

The stable reading plane

Camera motion pauses inside the cloud. The essential sentence holds long enough to read. HUMAN receives the only strong color emphasis.

CLARITY SHOULD MAKE COMPLEXITY
UNDERSTANDABLE

WITHOUT REMOVING WHAT MAKES IT

HUMAN.

Quiet prose: origin

The environment withdraws. Lines reveal vertically while the highlighted words provide salience. A poster stack introduces evidence at the exact moment graphic design is mentioned.

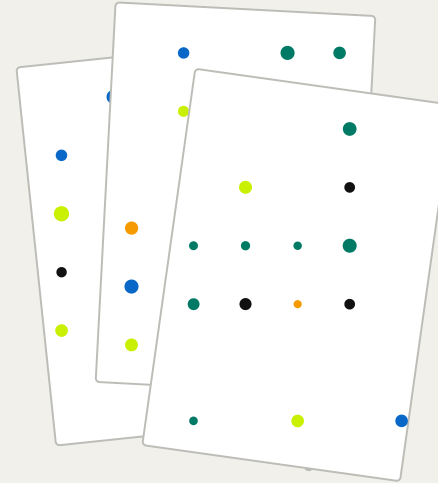

I learned that first through graphic design.

Type, image and rhythm can turn noise into meaning without erasing its energy.

Embedded idea: noise to meaning

A small animation illustrates the sentence instead of adding another full-screen world. Random dots and letter fragments align into a clear typographic composition.

Scale up the principle

The prose continues while loose points begin settling onto a floor plane. This is the bridge from graphic design into products and services.

That led me into products and services,

where the same principle has to work at a larger scale:

The structured field

The cloud resolves into a precise dot plane. Disciplines sit in three broad regions rather than becoming a conventional skills list.

Proof inside the structure

Client names appear as quiet evidence on the same plane. The sentence—not the logos—remains the primary read.

FIND THE STRUCTURE.
MAKE IT USABLE.
THEN GIVE IT CHARACTER.

Stillness creates the turn

All color and motion drain from the grid for one beat. The stillness should feel precise, controlled—and slightly lifeless.

STRUCTURE IS ONLY THE BEGINNING.

A perfect grid can still feel lifeless.

The heartbeat

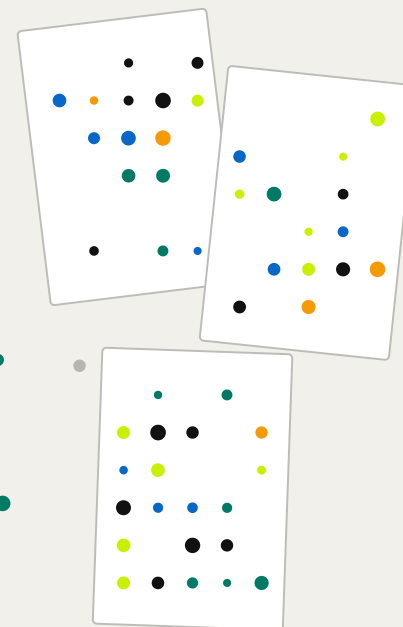

One point pulses. The response propagates through the grid. Salient verbs arrive with the wave rather than as a separate list.

PROTOTYPES LET ME TEST WHAT BRINGS IT BACK.

DEPTH. CLARITY. A PULSE.

Experiences that make sense—
and still leave room for curiosity.

A living field

The wave settles without becoming static. Dot-built artefacts gather at the sides. The ending leaves a direction and an invitation to explore.
